y Labor a sigura cu na ningun momento e persona aki ta of tawata riba payroll di su persona of su oficina, y definitivamente no ta un bodyguard di Sr. Oduber tampoco, paso nunca su persona a sinti e necesidad di cana rond cu uno. Contrario na esnan di MEP cu tabata cana cu hendenan arma rond di nan. "Unicamente ora bo consenshi ta sushi of ta consciente cu bo a haci malo esaki ta necesario y mi persona nunca a sinti e necesidad aki" minister Oduber a indica. Na e momento aki e persona aki ta un sospechoso y si resulta cu e ta culpabel e lo mester carga e consecuencia di esaki y sino e investigacion lo mester mustra lo contrario.

E mandatario ta desaprobatur acto criminal no obstante e persona cu ta comete e actonan baho aki. Tur cu haci malo contra e siguridad di e comunidad Arubano lo mester paga pa esaki. Semper y cuando e resulta culpabel, dunando cuerpo policial e espacio pa nan haci nan investigacion.

Na e momentonan aki, nos isla no ta pasando den su mihor momento den turismo y riba otro terenonan social. Rays send James Shields to Royals

KANSAS CITY, Mo. -- The Kansas City Royals gambled their future Sunday night for a chance to win right now. The Royals acquired former All-Star James Shields and fellow right-hander Wade Davis from Tampa Bay in a six-player deal that sent top prospects Wil Myers and Jake Odorizzi along with two other minor leaguers to the Rays. The swap immediately bolsters the Royals' starting rotation and should make them a contender in the relatively weak American League Central. "We have to start winning games at the major league level, and the way you develop a winning culture is by winning major league games," Royals general manager Dayton Moore said. "It's time for us to start winning at the major league level." Kansas City, which hasn't had a winning season since 2003, has long had one of the best farm systems in baseball, and slowly the cream has risen to the big league level. But there has remained a dearth of starting pitching that has hampered the Royals' chances for success for years, and Moore wanted to solve that problem this offseason.

He's already re-signed Jeremy Guthrie to a $25 million, three-year deal, and took on former All-Star Ervin Santana and $12 million of his contract from the Angels. But the trade for Shields and Davis is Moore's most aggressive move yet, giving Kansas City the ace it has been lacking since trading away Zack Greinke, along with another piece that could fit in the rotation or the bullpen. "When you can acquire a pitcher like James Shields and Wade Davis, we have to do it, because that's what we've committed to our team -- we've committed to our organization," Moore said. "It's important that we start winning games." Along with giving up Myers, widely voted the minor leagues' top player last season, the Royals also traded away Odorizzi, a talented right-hander who would have competed for a spot in the Kansas City rotation this season. Left-hander Mike Montgomery and third baseman Patrick Leonard also are headed to the Rays, while the Royals will receive a player to be named or cash. "We're constantly working to balance the present and the future, and always trying to thread the needle," Rays executive vice president of baseball operations Andrew Friedman said. "As an organization we rely more on the contributions of our young players basically than anyone else in baseball, and with this trade we're hoping to replenish our system and add a lot of players we feel can help us sustain this run of success that we've had for the last five years."

Shields, who turns 31 this month, has been a stalwart in the Tampa Bay rotation the past seven seasons. He was an All-Star two years ago, when he went 16-12 with a 2.82 ERA and finished third in the American League Cy Young Award voting, and was 15-10 with a 3.52 ERA in 33 starts last season, when he pitched 227 2/3 innings -- his sixth consecutive year of at least 200 innings pitched.

The only other pitchers to log at least 200 innings in six straight seasons are the Jays' Mark Buehrle, San Francisco's Matt Cain, Yankees left-hander CC Sabathia and Tigers ace Justin Verlander.

"If you're going to win consistently in the major leagues, you're going to need a rotation that gives you innings, competes, helps you win," Moore said. "That's what our goal is, to put together a very good rotation. We feel we've done that." Shields is due to receive $10.5 million this season. He has a club option for $12 million in 2014 with a $1 million buyout. The Royals suddenly have a glut of starting pitchers with Shields, Santana and Guthrie joined by Bruce Chen and Luis Mendoza, who are expected back from last year. Luke Hochevar is eligible for arbitration, while Danny Duffy and Felipe Paulino will return at some point during the middle of the season after undergoing Tommy John surgery.

Carmelo Anthony scores 34 points in return from lacerated finger

NEW YORK -- Carmelo Anthony insists there is no grudge against the Denver Nuggets. He just didn't want his old team -- or anyone else -- walking into his current home and leaving with a victory.

Anthony returned from a two-game absence with 34 points against his former team, and the New York Knicks beat the Nuggets 112-106 on Sunday night to remain the NBA's lone unbeaten team at home.

Back in the starting lineup after missing two games with a cut on the middle finger of his left hand that required stitches, Anthony twice made baskets in the final 2:08 after Denver had pulled within four points.

"I don't have no hard feelings toward Denver. It was just one of them games that no matter how many runs we went on, they just wasn't going anywhere," Anthony said.

"It was just a matter of us and me not wanting to lose on our home court, protecting our home court. That's something that we always said and we believed in. So there came a point in time in that fourth quarter where it was called upon me to step up."

Jason Kidd scored 17 points for the Knicks, who bounced back from their worst offensive performance of the season a night earlier in Chicago and improved to 8-0 at Madison Square Garden. Tyson Chandler and J.R. Smith each had 15 points.

It's the Knicks' best start at home since beginning 9-0 in 1992-93.

Ty Lawson had 23 points and Danilo Gallinari had 21 points and nine rebounds against the team that drafted him and later dealt him in the package for Anthony in February 2011.

Anthony decided to play after working out before the game, shooting 10 of 24 while adjusting to playing with the finger covered. He beat the Nuggets for the first time after the Knicks dropped a double-overtime game here last season.

And no matter what Anthony said, Chandler said players never stop wanting to beat their old team.

"You always want to show them what they're missing and I think they saw tonight," Chandler said.

Corey Brewer made the first two baskets of the fourth to give Denver an 88-80 lead, but the Knicks came right back with consecutive 3-pointers by Steve Novak and a dunk by Chandler to tie it. Ronnie Brewer scored the next four points to make it a 12-0 run, and after a basket by Kenneth Faried, Anthony made a jumper and a 3-pointer as the Knicks opened a 97-90 advantage.

Denver from there could get it down as close as four, Anthony nailing a jumper on one occasion and driving into the lane for another basket to keep the Nuggets away.

"Tonight we let one player get hot, Melo, and once he started hitting he was unstoppable," Faried said.

The offense wasn't quite fixed after New York was held to 85 points and 32.1 percent shooting in an eight-point loss at Chicago on Saturday. Raymond Felton was 4 for 15 a night after a 9-for-30 night, and Smith was just 5 of 19, leaving the Nuggets feeling as if they let one get away.

"I tell the team all the time, I say I don't mind losing to a good team, but we lose because we give them things," Denver coach George Karl said. "We give them gifts."

Anthony spent the first 7½ years of his career with the Nuggets, telling them in the 2010 offseason he wanted out. He and Karl clashed at times during their time together, but Karl predicted their relationship would be fine someday and said he hasn't backed away from his belief that Anthony will eventually get to the top of basketball.

"I've said that I feel Melo's going to win a championship someday," Karl said before the game. "He's going to figure out that scoreboard numbers and stat sheets aren't important. It's the team scoreboard and intangibles of the game that make winners champions."

The Knicks gave up more than they wanted to in order to get Anthony, and the Nuggets had better balance and more success afterward. Now the Knicks seem to have found the system and personnel that fit best around Anthony, and Karl said the trade was a win-win.

"They wanted to get back to the top of the mountain and they took a chance on going out and getting one of the top 10 players in basketball. It didn't work for a while but it looks like it's working now," Karl said.

Anthony was only 1 of 6 in the first quarter and the Nuggets hit 11 of 19 shots, yet Denver's lead was only 25-23. The offenses got untracked in the second, New York outscoring Denver 38-33 to take a 61-58 lead at the break. Anthony scored 11 points in the period, when the Knicks made 16 of 17 free throws.

Kevin Youkilis mulling Yanks' offer

Youk loves New York.

And, according to a New Yorker who knows Kevin Youkilis as well as almost anyone, New York is going to love Youk back. That is, if the two wind up forming a professional alliance.

Edward Youkilis, who owns Edward's, a popular Tribeca bistro that Kevin Youkilis frequents whenever he is in town, told ESPNNewYork.com on Monday that the love affair between his nephew and New York City goes back a lot further than the recent talks between his agent and the Yankees to bring Youk to the Bronx as a replacement for the injured Alex Rodriguez.

"Even when he was with the Red Sox, he always said he would love to play here someday," Edward Youkilis said. "He said it would be an experience like no other."

According to Joe Bick, Kevin Youkilis' agent, the 33-year-old is "seriously considering" an offer from the Yankees that Bick and his client consider "very legitimate," reportedly an offer for one-year at $12 million. Bick and Youkilis are also said to be considering at least one other offer, possibly from the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"From what I've heard, it sounds good for us," Edward Youkilis said.

Earlier Monday, Edward Youkilis had spoken to his brother Mike, Kevin's father, who told him there was no news yet on the biggest story in the Youkilis family, the possibility that a once-hated member of the Boston Red Sox might become a member of the Yankees in 2013.

"I was hoping you were going to give me some good news," Edward Youkilis said. "It would be a very exciting thing for all of us if he comes to New York."

Edward's Restaurant, on West Broadway, is like a shrine to Kevin Youkilis, with Youk's Hot Sauce and a red wine named after him and bobbleheads and photos of him on display. Whenever the Red Sox were in town, Youkilis would bring a group of teammates down to the place and according to Edward, often spoke about his desire to someday play in New York.

Even as recently as last season, Youkilis had expressed an interest about playing for the Yankees. "He told me he was excited when he went to the White Sox (in a trade last June) because he wanted to be away from all the drama in Boston," Edward Youkilis said. "But then I think he kind of missed it. He told me he'd love to come here."

The likelihood of Youkilis joining the Yankees increased Sunday when the Cleveland Indians, one of Youkilis' other reported suitors, signed veteran infielder Mark Reynolds.

"We're looking at all our options right now," Bick said. "When the time comes, we'll make a decision."

Yankees general manager Brian Cashman did not immediately return a call seeking comment. But a source with knowledge of the talks said that while an offer was on the table to Youkilis, Cashman had yet to receive a reply.

Asked why his client would accept a one-year deal with the Yankees rather than a longer deal with another team, Bick cited Youkilis' ability to play other positions besides third base. "There are considerations involved," Bick said. "I think the Yankees' obvious issue is A-Rod's injury, but Kevin's a versatile guy."

Youkilis played 111 games at third base and 26 games at first last season for the Red Sox and White Sox. He could also conceivably serve as a fill-in for Yankees first baseman Mark Teixeira, who missed 39 games with injuries in 2012, and as a right-handed designated hitter in place of Andruw Jones, a free agent who is not expected to return.

As for concerns that Yankee fans might not accept not just a former Boston Red Sox but a particularly hated one, Edward Youkilis dismissed them.

"He doesn't seem to think so, and from what I've heard here, neither do I," he said. "I haven't heard anything negative about it."

The only question seems to be, will Joba be all right with it?"

Considering that Derek Jeter was able to bury the hatchet with Roger Clemens, the odds are that the "feud" between Joba Chamberlain and Youkilis -- which is based on the pitcher throwing over the head of the hitter on a number of occasions in the past -- would evaporate the moment Youkilis became a Yankee.

No decision on the Yankees' offer is imminently expected Bick said he and Youkilis were still "exploring all our options" and would make a decision "when the time is right."

But Uncle Ed said he would look for a sign during the game between the Houston Texans and the New England Patriots tonight in Foxboro. Youkilis is scheduled to attend and sit in Tom Brady's private box.

"I'm sure at some point during the game they'll show a shot of him," Ed Youkilis said. "Wouldn't it be great if he was wearing a Yankees cap?"
